

It's very simple. Talking to me on the telephone at any time is a privilege, not a right.

I'm not required to be generally available to all just by virtue of choosing to be available to some who've personally been provided with my phone number.